Compared with other Montana counties, one of the most important and unique characteristics of Roosevelt County is that it's home to the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, the third largest Indian Reservation in Montana with a population of 6,391 (18 percent of Montana's Indian Reservation population) out of the county's population of 10,451, according to the U.S. Bureau of the Census, 2000. Information in the Count of Persons by Age, Race, and Gender table on the back page will help people make decisions regarding the American Indians and others living in Roosevelt County. For example, businesses looking to hire can see how many working age people live in the county and educators can use the school age population numbers for planning for enrollment changes.

Located in northeastern Montana, Roosevelt County is Montana's 19th most populous, according to the 2003 Census Bureau estimates. Wolf Point, the county seat, is the state's 28th largest city with a population of 2,619, according to the 2003 Census Bureau estimates. According to the Montana Almanac, by authors Andrea Merrill and Judy Jacobson, the county was established in 1919 and named for U.S. President Theodore Roosevelt.

Roosevelt County has the fourth largest number of American Indian farmers and ranchers in Montana. Montana is one of the nation's top wheat producers and an important player both nationally and internationally in terms of the quantity and quality of wheat production. Roosevelt County ranks fourth in Montana in terms of all wheat for grain production and ranks 12th in the U.S., according to the 2002 Census of Agriculture.

According to the U.S. Bureau of the Census, median income for Roosevelt County households in 2002 was $25,138, compared to Montana's median income of $34,105. The lower income in Roosevelt County is caused in part by relatively high county unemployment. The 2002 annual average unemployment rate for Roosevelt County was 7.4 percent, compared to 4.6 percent for Montana. (See the Roosevelt County annual average labor force table on inside.)
